

Abstract

An energy recovering apparatus and method for a plasma display panel wherein a charge time of the plasma display panel can be shortened with the aid of a compulsory resonance to thereby improve a discharge characteristic. In the apparatus, a first path charges an inductor using energy from a source capacitor. A second path is separated from the source capacitor to supply energy of the inductor to the plasma display panel.